CLIMATE ACTION NEWS

September 2024

President's letter

Greetings,

We are excited and optimistic as we approach the fall season for the new momentum, collaborations, and opportunities for growth and integrity in carbon markets. From Climate Week to COP through NACW 2025 in early spring, the climate community is abuzz with life, activity, and progress on advancing and strengthening carbon markets. In addition to the events listed above, Reserve staff will be at the Sustainable Agriculture Summit, Verge, and the Net Zero Conference and would be happy to connect in person (more info in our calendar of events below).

During this time of tremendous opportunities for the market, there are also tremendous opportunities for the Reserve and our work. We are looking forward to continuing our pioneering and influential work and welcoming a new President to chart the direction. While I am not retiring in the classical sense and will be available to continue supporting the Reserve in the coming months and years, I will be moving on to the next chapter of my life, which will involve only a part-time commitment.

The Reserve has been working on the forefront of the global fight against climate change and will continue the battle. With a well-earned and respected reputation and decades of consequential, collaborative work, the Reserve is looking to build upon our experience and expertise and expand the organization's influence and work. The new leader will play a pivotal role in guiding the Reserve's strategic direction and scaling its efforts in addressing one of the world's most pressing challenges, while supporting and shaping the future of global carbon markets and demonstrating the power of market-based solutions. If you are a skilled and motivated individual interested in fostering innovation, contributing to the development of impactful climate solutions, and making a lasting difference in the world, we encourage you to apply!

Kind regards,
Craig Ebert

Reserve kicks off search for next President

The Reserve is seeking a mission-focused, dynamic, and innovative President to lead the organization in fulfilling its mission and vision, guide its growth, and build upon its successes. We are working with ThinkingAhead Executive Search to fill the role with a desired start date by winter 2024/2025. The President will ensure the organization and its programs are run effectively and efficiently and contribute to the dialogue and direction of climate change policy in the US and beyond. This is a high-profile opportunity for a proven leader with deep knowledge of climate change science and policy, a collaborative leadership style, and a passion for advancing market-based solutions to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.
